1. The first part of the experiment involves the synthesis of a compound from a starting material. The reaction is carried out in a round-bottom flask equipped with a magnetic stirrer and a reflux condenser. The starting material is weighed and placed in the flask, followed by the addition of the reagents. The mixture is stirred and heated to reflux for a specified period of time. The progress of the reaction is monitored by thin-layer chromatography (TLC) using a silica gel plate and a suitable solvent system. The product is isolated by extraction and purification techniques, such as column chromatography or recrystallization. The yield and purity of the product are determined by weighing and spectroscopic analysis.
